BUYING IN AMERICA

ENGLISH GOVERNMENT ORDERS FROM OHIO FIRM.

Machinery Wanted in Manufacture of Military Supplies Could Not Be Found in England—London Journal Deprecates the Necessity, But Acknowledges That It Exists—American Manufacturing Machinery Far Superior to English Contrivances.

London, Oct. 14.—A leading London journal in its latest issue pays the following high tribute to American ingenuity:

There are sometimes occasions, says the article in question, when it does not pay to be too patriotic. This especially applies to governments when the stern necessity arises for keeping pace with rival administrations.

A case of this nature has, we learn, recently been propounded to our own government, with the result that its desire to patronize home industries has had for once to be placed in the background. We refer to a large purchase of machinery which has just been made by the war office for installation in Woolwich arsenal. The machines, consisting of a set of eight clever instruments for the manufacture of artillery carriages and wagon wheels, have been obtained from our go-ahead cousins of Defiance, O. So superior are they in the matter of rapid work to our old methods, that the arsenal can now turn out 10 times as much finished material as it could do previously. Both Russia and Japan have for some years adopted these wonderful engines, and as they were being supplied to other great military powers of Europe, it was deemed advisable by the war office to place itself on level terms with these countries.

The authorities, however, did not order the machines until they had sent a special commission round to all the likely firms of machine manufacturers in Britain to see if similar instruments could be obtained at home. It was found that nobody made them in England, and the one or two firms willing to make them wanted such big prices that the government found itself compelled to go to the only firm in the world which makes a feature of this special article for the benefit of warlike administrations.

SONES & WALKER RETIRE.

E. L. Smith Purchases Helix Business for John S. Norvell.

The firm of Sones & Walker, the well known Helix hardware and farm implement company, has retired from business. E. L. Smith of this city having purchased the entire business, stock and property owned by the firm.

The property included a large stock of hardware and farming implements, a store building, dwelling house, warehouse and four lots.

An inventory is now being taken and the transfer will be made in a few days.

Mr. Smith will not run the business but bought it for John S. Norvell, his brother-in-law, who came to Pendleton from Athens, Tenn., about three months ago. Mr. Norvell will take charge of the business at once, add a large stock of furniture, something not now carried in Helix, and will make other extensive improvements and additions, and will conduct a first-class business.

Mr. Sones has been in business about eight years. Mr. Walker buying an interest from him about two years ago. Recently Mr. Sones purchased Mr. Walker's interest and that transfer had scarcely been made, when Mr. Sones sold the entire business to Mr. Smith.

Mr. Walker has invested in wheat land in Gilliam county, and will spend some time there, while Mr. Sones has not entirely decided upon his future plans.

RECKLESS COURAGE

STORY TOLD BY COSSACK OF A JAPANESE SOLDIER.

Surrounded in a House the Oriental Killed Six Men and Wounded the Seventh and Then Jumped From the Burning Building Upon an Up-pointed Lance—The Jap Laughed During the Entire Melee.

Berlin, Oct. 14.—The desperate courage of the individual Japanese soldier was never better illustrated than in the following story from Odessa of a Cossack named Uriadseff:

"Near Tashichao we pursued a Jap infantryman into a Chinese house, where he rushed up a loose stairway leading to a loft, and began to shoot. We had no ammunition, so thought we would burn him out, when down went one of our men with a bullet through his back. This made us mad and we rushed up the stairs. There was room for only one at a time, and Misha Medvedtseff rushed first.

"The Jap waited till Misha was on him, and then fired right through his body, wounding the man behind. The rush from behind drove Misha's dead body on top of him, and the third man, taking advantage of this, hacked at the Jap, cutting his cheek. Yellow face yelled, and fired again, killing our third man. Now it was my time, and though I knew I was done for, I felt no fear, but only thirst to cut down the Jap, who laughed at every shot. However, I wasn't going to give myself away, so instead of rushing on I stuck my lance. The Jap drove it down with his rifle muzzle, but it went through his knee. He yelled and shot at me, and I tumbled down, and remembered no more. There were three bloodthirsty demons behind, and Master Jap wasn't safe yet.

"I heard afterward how he rushed at one man who hesitated to go on, pulled him over the bodies and struck him with a knife. The other two men were knocked down by shots. When more of our men came up, they fired the house, after pulling me and the other wounded out. The Jap seeing he was done for, put his head through a window and laughed. He then jumped, and was caught on a lance."

ECHO SUGAR BEET.

Fine Specimen From C. R. Lisle Farm at Despain & Clark's.

W. H. Boyd of Echo, brought to this city a sample of Echo sugar beets raised on the C. R. Lisle farm, near that city, which surpasses over half of the beet crop grown in the Grand Ronde valley, in smoothness, proportion, and general requirements for a high sugar per cent.

The sample beet is about eight inches long, four inches in diameter and weighs six pounds, and is smooth and symmetrical, and judges of sugar beets say it will test at least 21 per cent saccharine.

If it tests this amount of sugar matter, it would be worth $6 a ton, under the contract between Grand Ronde farmers and the beet factory. The prices fixed there are $4.50 per ton for beets that test 18 per cent sugar matter and 50 cents per ton, extra, for each additional one per cent of sugar matter tested by the crop.

This beautiful specimen of the new industry of Umatilla county may be seen at the grocery store and commission house of Despain & Clark on Main street.
